DETAILED ACTION

1. The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this action can be found in a prior Office action.

2. Claims 3 and 5 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

Claims 3 and 5 merely recite a desired result and fail to recite any structure for obtaining the desired results. The structure that goes to make up the device must be clearly and positively specified. For example, claim 3 should recite a means for a user to determine the rotational speed segment and the respective color. Claim 5 should recite a means for preserving the predetermined value of the rotational speed of the engine and the data reflecting correspondence between the rotational speed segment and a respective color when the tachometer is being re-set or re-initialized.

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 1 and 3-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Westberg et al. (6,137,399) in view of Weyer.

Westberg et al. discloses a tachometer comprising a shift light comprising an LED 30 for indicating the optimum time to shift gears, and a microprocessor 64 for providing an output signal to a shiftlight output circuit 70 when a desired shift setpoint is reached during actual operation. The microprocessor stores a plurality of RPM values at which the shift indicator is to be illuminated, and therefore comprises a memory device containing at least one predetermined value of the rotational speed as a reference data indicative of the optimal timing for gear shifting. Accordingly, the only difference between the claimed invention and the prior art consists in providing an RGB illumination device in lieu of the LED 30 for indicating the optimum time to shift gears. Weyer discloses an instrument panel comprising a plurality of red, green and blue LED's in order to allow a driver to selected a desired instrument illumination color. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art to provide the LED indicator 30 of Westberg et al. with a plurality of red, green and blue LED's in order to allow a driver to select a desired color for indicating the optimal timing for gear shifting, e.g., green for shifting and red for not shifting.

Regarding claim 5, it would have been obvious to store the RPM values in a nonvolatile memory in order to avoid having to reenter the data whenever the tachometer is reset.

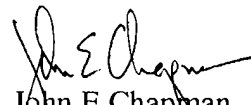

Regarding claim 6, Westberg et al. teaches using pushbuttons on control module 26 to input the plurality of RPM values at which the shift indicator is to be illuminated. Note col. 4, lines 46-50.

5. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
